Spring training 2021

With the start of spring training for our home teams, the Boston Red Sox and Minnesota Twins, there are safety protocols in place due to COVID-19 and fans are urged to confirm the latest details before making plans.

Red Sox spring training

The first spring training game took place Feb. 28 at JetBlue Park at Fenway South, where the team is anticipated to play a total of 15 Grapefruit League home games.

Appropriate physical distancing and safety protocols will allow fans to return in a limited capacity for 2021 exhibition games by operating JetBlue Park at approximately 24 percent of its normal capacity (around 2,400 fans each game; regular seating capacity is 9,909). All tickets will be sold in physically distanced pods comprising primarily two to four seats that will allow for at least 6 feet between groups. Season ticket holders will be offered the first opportunity to attend exhibition games and additional tickets may go on sale to the general public depending on availability. For schedule and ticket details visit www.mlb.com/redsox/spring-training

Minnesota Twins spring training

The season started Feb. 28 for the Twins and the team will play 14 home games at Hammond Stadium in CenturyLink Sports Complex.

In accordance with new protocols, slightly more than 2,400 fans per game (about 28% of the normal capacity of 8,730) can attend a home game at Hammond Stadium. A physically distanced seating plan utilizing pods, sold in sets of two or four contiguous seats only, to maximize guest comfort and safety. Due to limited capacity, season and group ticket plans have been discontinued this spring; existing Twins spring training season ticket holders will have exclusive access to purchase single-game tickets before any remaining inventory being released to the public. In the news and accolades

The Weather Channel

On Oct. 1, the destination was featured in a morning broadcast segment with travel expert Laura Begley Bloom that provided helpful information during this time of social distancing: “One of my favorite places is Fort Myers and Sanibel, Florida. The Beaches of Fort Myers & Sanibel are made up of hundreds of barrier and coastal islands where you find 50 miles of white sand beaches. The destination also offers a lot of quaint local cottages that are really great for social distancing. They also have islands with an unusual ordinance called no buildings higher than a palm tree which means you’ll get big open skies and amazing views of the Gulf. Also, almost three quarters of Sanibel is preserved for migrating birds, nesting turtles, and other wildlife, so that means a lot of room for visitors to social distance.” youtube.com/watch?v=xDY6CFZvyJI

National Geographic, 10 books that whisk you away to paradise

“Gift from the Sea,” by Anne Morrow Lindbergh, 1955.

“Shells plucked from the beach on Florida’s Captiva Island inspired Lindbergh’s poetic musings on marriage, motherhood, and the simpler living the seaside brings. “I must remember to see with island eyes,” writes the author/aviator (and wife of Charles Lindbergh) while packing her bags to return to real life. This book, celebrating its 65th anniversary this year, is short enough to breeze through in an afternoon. The arts

Art In Flight at Southwest Florida International Airport (RSW)

For the last 15 years, the Alliance for the Arts, a nonprofit visual and performing arts center in the heart of Fort Myers, and the Lee County Port Authority have partnered on Art In Flight, which brings art to the public spaces and the millions of travelers at Southwest Florida International Airport.

The current exhibit, Pop of Color, features a diverse collection of 29 artworks that use line, shape, texture and color to amaze the senses. With a varied collection of styles and media, artists on display demonstrate the wide possibilities of abstract art from clean and crisp edges to wild and energetic strokes of paint. Various materials and their textures are explored as well with everything from found objects to sculptural, low relief mixed media. Pop of Color will exhibit now through May 2021. artinlee.org/experience/exhibits/art-in-flight

Alliance ArtsPark, Fort Myers

Alliance for the Arts ArtsPark offers a community hub for discovery and creativity, education and a place where people, art and imagination meet. The project connects neighbors with a new sidewalk, regenerates the land with a beautiful thriving pocket of Florida flowers and at the center of it all, stands a recently installed towering piece of public art, the Caloosahatchee Water Wall, by internationally acclaimed artist Michael Singer.

A depiction of the Caloosahatchee River, the 25-foot sculpture illuminates blooming native vines that climb the Water Wall's textured, gray lattice. With the Caloosahatchee River just ¼ mile away, it's only fitting that art and nature harmoniously coincide. As an outdoor classroom, the Alliance ArtsPark and Water Wall are free and open to the public to explore. The project champions the course of Florida's unique, ecological memoir while celebrating the warmth and energy of the local neighborhood. artinlee.org/experience/artspark
